I am only a holiday maker to Bryher, however, feel that as this is probably one of the islands main 'industries' that a holidaymakers viewpoint may be relevant. - In general regeneration and improvement should be welcomed in all areas as long as this does not impinge on other residents (even if temporary) or buildings on the island. As Bryher is a small community it should be important to take existing residents viewpoints very much into consideration and if agreement, by all, cannot be reached on the proposed plans, that alternatives are considered by all parties. In a places such as Bryher skylines and views form much of the rugged charm of the island and should be considered as part of the landscape here.
