To whom it may concern

We live in Atlanta which is just above Glenhope cottages, overlooking Great Porth. Although we are retired from the accommodation business we understand the havoc of having barges of rocks dumped in the bay and thirty tonne dumpers transporting them around the beaches and shore from April to September, during peak holiday time. This is the exact opposite to the information that we were given that the work would be from September to April.

As you know, visitors come to these islands to enjoy peaceful beach and walking holidays with clear water to swim in.

With such short notice of this work there is no time for proprietors to warn their visitors who have booked, paid deposits and are committed to plane or boat tickets, to change their minds without financial loss to all parties.

It is not the Islanders fault that permits were not obtained in time, but they are the ones whose business and finance will be lost.

I hope there will be suitable compensation for any loss of earnings if this plan goes ahead.

Gerald and Gillian Langdon.
